

PROCESS

Register a submission account

Upload manuscript and sign agreement online

Editorial review and peer review

Notification of acceptance or rejection of the manuscript

Author pays article processing fee (if necessary)

Article publication

• Please ensure the accuracy of author information. Once the manuscript is accepted, author information cannot be modified again

• If the manuscript needs to be revised, the editor may have multiple communications with the author

• If the author is required to pay the article processing fee and fails to complete the payment within 60 days, the acceptance of the article will be rejected by default

Note:

- After paying the article processing fee, the author may be requested to revise the grammar of the article. Within two working days of paying the processing fee, the author also has the right to proactively suggest necessary grammar revisions to the editor. These grammatical revisions should not make substantial changes to the original content of the article. The editor will conduct a brief assessment after receiving the revised manuscript from the author.
- To ensure the accuracy of information in the final published article, the author must provide all relevant information, such as the funding information, during the proofreading process before publication. Once the article is published (following web page standards), no further modification requests will be entertained.